

Sweet Serenity

Through collaboration and know-how, Bradford Design Group creates spaces that calm and delight

Jane Bradford's fascination with design is equal parts nature and nurture. A childhood spent recognizing the details of historic buildings and neighborhoods with her father and rummaging through fabric scraps with her mother led to an appreciation for the architecture and pattern play inherent in design.

While an eye for beauty reigns in Bradford's work, the inseparability of collaboration and interiors keeps clients calling on her firm, Bradford Design Group. "Residential design is personal," says Bradford, principal designer. "It's a team effort to put together someone's home."

Vetted vendors and tradespeople drive a dream to fruition, but listening intently to a client's vision and seeing how their home serves their lifestyle are keys to crafting spaces that offer both aesthetically pleasing and functional design. "We get our inspiration from our clients," Bradford says. "But our work always has a calming effect, even if we have pink walls and red sofas."

In a recent Cherry Creek North townhome, serenity was key. Incorporating an aqua and green palette lent the space color while infusing a sense of peace. Honoring the client's wish for fewer pieces that carried a big impact, Bradford and her team played with textures—velvet, bamboo, and nickel—to add depth in each selection. When it came to lighting the townhome, the group emphasized sightlines from front to back, using metallic art to reflect light beaming through the windows and down from statement fixtures.

The finished project illustrates what all Bradford Design Group spaces provide: heart and soul.

"A home should breathe your personality," says Bradford. "Turning someone's house into a place that feels more like them is priceless."

bradforddesigngroup.com

1. Interior designer Jane Bradford.
2. Grand mirrors flank either side of a classic fireplace, adding depth to the texture-rich living room.
3. Lanterns with a nickel finish complement metallic art that acts as a backdrop for gatherings around the Kravet table.
4. Details such as the Kravet blue velvet chairs, live greenery, and hand-selected accessories transform the home into an elegant retreat.

Headshot by Kristina Ellis Photography

Interior photography by SBrenner Photography